

Life in the Day of an Angel

Mushiba: Receiving information that focuses on improving Self can be intense. To ease that intensity, Waith’s teaching style follows two of his Guidelines for Growth: Be Joyful, Be Serious. He encourages people to ask questions and often, his answers can bring lightheartedness, as the following example shows:

Question: “You have talked very little about what you do on a day-to-day basis. Is there any way that you could tell us a little teeny bit?”

Waith: “We do enjoy the questions that come. We leave our house each day and we put on our robe and attach our wings. We travel to the office where we sit at our computer, and we plug into The Universal Consciousness. We then give a printout that directs us to who is doing what, and what is doing to whom, and we then know what we are to do that day. And then we go to lunch.”

Question: “No coffee break?”

Waith: “We do not have coffee here. We have another beverage that is equally addictive, as you would have on the plane. We have our gossip time in the afternoon, and then we all go home and watch television and drink our beer, and then we go to bed and start all over again the next day.” (Note: There is continual laughter from the group during this dialogue)

Question: “Do you take your wings off?”

Waith: “Oh, of course, we take our wings off!”

Question: “Before or after you get into bed?”

Waith: “Much before, because we would not want to crush them when we were laying down in bed. Does that answer your question?”

Response: “Just like here!”

Waith is irreverent and yet serious about his mission of guiding us to find our answers within Self. Even though this excerpt is joyful, he is also giving a subtle message ~ a message related to behavior and attitude.